Allison Burda & Cam Gee Meet Me At The Library

The library brings us together. A community requires safe, accessible spaces to learn, share stories, and connect with others in person and virtually. Libraries provide equitable access to resources and amenities; a quiet place to read a book, a research portal, internet connection, temporary relief from the elements, or even just a place to get a drink of water. The library sustains the people within our communities through these vital services. If knowledge, social connection, and the opportunity for change are infinite so too must our public spaces adapt to become many things to many people. The library offers us the symbiosis of a physical space as a point of access to information while also utilizing digital media and technology to reach us wherever we are. Our communal needs sustain this public space designed for people of all ages and abilities which in turn sustains our own connections to community, history, technology, and each other.
