VALLEY PARK BRANCH
MURAL PROJECT

Vivian Rosas

In terms of natural beauty, Stoney Creek is rich with it. With my piece, I hope to honour its local environment and the communities that live and engage with it. My proposed design celebrates exploring the conservation areas near the new and expanded Valley Park Branch. It showcases the merging of the dynamic and diverse communities who use the trails at the Eramosa Karst Conservation Area and those who venture to see the falls at Felker's Falls Conservation Area. I used a bright, bold and limited palette to create lively organic shapes, inspired by the flora and fauna of the area. I also chose to showcase some of the species that inhabit the area, such as the Cooper Hawk, the Eastern Bluebird, the Saw-whet Owl, the Cottontail Rabbit, and the Jefferson Salamander to name a few. This whimsical piece also shows different folks discovering the magical natural environment that surrounds the new branch. It's a look towards a future where Stoney Creek continues to thrive and grow.
